Celebrity Shopping with Barbara Barran

Posted on April 29th, 2008 by Adrienne Papp

Barbara Barran started Classic Rug Collection in New York City in 1999, and it wasn't long before her luxurious rugs attracted the attention of discerning clientele like Bill Murray and Rachel Ray...

With an early interest in historical sources, such as Art Deco/Szeccession, Barbara's craft continues to showcase the most artistically innovative rug designs in the world.

Barbara's travels take her to Thailand, Nepal, New Zealand and Peru, creating original handcrafted rugs with luxurious and sensual materials including silk and alpaca.

She has recently introduced a series of pure silk and pashmina rugs featuring Eastern-inspired designs, which are hand made in Nepal.

rugs are cloud-soft to the touch, incredibly slim and refined.

These exquisite pieces have been shown and sold at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts along with numerous other museums and exhibits around the world...

Destination Hollywood, this Classic Rug Collection of pure art and beauty is now gaining attention from fashion to film and the taste of those shoppers with elegance and grace.

Thanks for the introduction to this great source; I am an architect, and as I do high-end homes, this is a great help. And I will let some fellow designers in on this info.
